PRESS RELEASE – Thursday 5th April 2007 - FastMarkets Ltd are pleased to announce that Shanghai Futures Exchange copper, aluminium and the recently added zinc contract prices are now available to subscribers live and streaming on BaseMetals.com.

BaseMetals.com is a leading provider of online metals market information providing rapid market commentary and research coupled with streaming data from the leading metals exchanges, effectively providing a dealing-room experience for market participants in their offices, from home or on the move via mobiles or blackberry's.

FastMarkets Limited which owns and operates BaseMetals.com is an authorised data vendor of Shanghai Futures Exchange market information.

The Company recognises the increasing importance of the Chinese metals market and has significantly increased its coverage of the Asian markets through its research, news and analysis. BaseMetals.com Currently the business manages its Asian activities from its Singapore office, although the opening of a Chinese office is also under consideration.

Commenting upon the SHFE data feed, Ross Norman – Director commented “It is a ground breaking innovation providing market participants great visibility of the SHFE metal prices and underscores our ambition to take metals market information both to new levels and to an ever wider audience”.

Richard Jakob – Sales Director added “We seek to continually innovate and develop our product so that our users have the fullest and most informative experience of these fast-moving and exciting markets”.

About FastMarkets Ltd

FastMarkets is a leading provider of online commodity market information, bringing precious and base metals prices, news and research to a worldwide user base through its two websites TheBullionDesk.com and BaseMetals.com. The two websites have become foremost in their respective fields by successfully delivering rapid data and up-to-the-moment information that has come to be seen by market participants as reliable, authoritative and influential – the websites are successful primarily because they have successfully leveraged technology to deliver information that is both comprehensive and timely.

In addition, the websites are unique in publishing exclusive access to leading bank research and by offering rapid in-house market commentary from its leading team of market analysts.
