Tuesday, 29th November 2005 - TheBullionDesk Limited, providers of rapid news, commentary and data for the world's metal markets, announces a change in the company name to FastMarkets Ltd with immediate effect.

TheBullionDesk Limited currently operates two specialist websites: TheBullionDesk.com and BaseMetals.com which provide fast, reliable and comprehensive sources of real-time market information to their respective market sectors. The Company has a successful track record in operating busy financial websites using state-of-the-art technology to stream real-time market data, to provide rapid market commentary from its in-house editorial team and giving access to exclusive in-depth market analysis from leading trading institutions.

We are changing the company name to reflect the growth of the business from the original website TheBullionDesk.com into other commodity markets. The URLs of the respective websites remain unaltered.

Commenting on the name change Joint Managing Director and co-founder Dominic Hall said: "our new name communicates the essence of our business as a provider of real time expert information products and services to commodity niche segments".

Co-founder and Joint Managing Director Ross Norman added: "The new name gives us the scope to launch new, highly active financial websites with the same rapid delivery model as our original one, TheBullionDesk.com.
